

From the author Barbara Towell comes Wedding Bells — a present day drama, set in a London suburb. Join Philip (bridegroom), Lisa (bride) and her friend Marilyn to experience this ... “most joyful occasion ...” from each of their perspectives. Marilyn: “Actually, dunno really what I’m doin’ ‘ere.” Lisa: “...They see each other at the hairdresser’s every so often. I see the postman everyday; doesn’t mean I have to invite him to my wedding, does it?” Philip: “You expect surprises on your wedding day, don’t you? Lots of them — nice surprises...”

About the author

Barbara is an English and Drama teacher as well as being the author of the successful international novel A Little Piece for Mother.

She has published work in many genres. With her husband John, she wrote the musical Faith is the Key staged both in Harrow and during the Dumfries Festival in Scotland.

Her other published works include: Patchworks – a poetry anthology, articles in national magazines and some years ago she sold a series of children’s short stories to Dial-a-Telephone Story. In 2013, she was lucky enough to win the Harrow Libraries’ crime writing competition and prior to that, won the Harrow Millennium Carol Writing Competition. Although she has written, directed and performed in many productions, Wedding Bells was her first play to be published.
