

Sai-Ko is a collection of twelve stories that will take you to the depths of human nature, a scuba dive incursion into the unconscious mind. Deliciously dark, savoury and funny, this book is written with undisguised frankness, offering a glimpse into the post-Communist society in a country sentenced to live with the scars of war.

About the author

Gabriela currently lives in London, is married and has a young son. This is her first book of short stories. Gabriela's first published book is Santa Claws, a book for young people aged 13+ about bullying. She is currently writing a crime novel.

Gabriela Harding was born in Romania, where she earned a degree in English Language and Literature and worked as an English teacher. She studied Latin, French, Spanish and Modern Greek.

Before she moved to London, Gabriela wrote a collection of poetry that won a National Poetry Award.

One of her short stories, 'The Trumpet Player,' appeared on the notable contenders' list at the Bristol Short Story Competition in 2013. Three other stories were published in the UK by 'Dream Catcher', 'First Edition Literary Magazine', and 'A Million Stories'.
