

Be it born to darkness and sacrifice,
or be it raised amidst love and hope;
for those who dwell under light and freedom,
and those who are shackled to ways preordained,
the cruellest curses stem from our greatest blessings.
And yet some are cursed, so that others may be blessed.

Kamau is born to a people who repress all emotion, but his first experience of grief shakes the foundations of all his beliefs. It thrusts him on a journey for answers, and ultimately pits him and a few unexpected companions against an ageless power.

About the author

Jude Itakali is a Ugandan author whose footsteps have dotted the African continent, and whose dreams have taken him to places all around the world. The bliss between fantasy and reality has always enthralled him, and the need for an African adventure that appeals to a global audience compelled him to craft this contemporary fantasy, threading the lines between what is real and what is magical.
