

George and Flora Head to the Country

Rachel Haywood

Be different: buy direct from the author or tslbooks.uk

Chapter 1

George and Flora had grown used to their life at number 22 with just their mother to look after them, after their father mysteriously disappeared. Their mother did not mention their father, and they built a new life together. After a few difficulties along the way, they found life quite agreeable, with strong bonds formed between brother and sister.

George continued to be head of the household, and mostly in charge of his mother's affairs. He was highly respected in the cat community, often being sought after for advice and guidance on practical matters. Flora enjoyed being the baby of the family, and escaped lightly on being consulted on the more serious matters of life.

One day, however, their mother informed them that she had a big surprise. They were all going on holiday to Yorkshire to stay in a country cottage with their father. Flora was overjoyed at this news, and couldn't wait to see her father again but George had slightly

