JAMES: How?

AMOL: Breaking all the established chains and settings which are in favour of mankind for which we always pine and move ahead – and that which always come along the way to help without any cost.

JAMES: How has she done all this?

AMOL: With the help of evil, lust and greed – with the help of her well-wishers, parents, brothers and sisters.

JAMES: Has your mother some such men too?

AMOL: Yes. All have such men and women.

JAMES: Yes?

AMOL: Yes ... yes. Many more!

JAMES: Is your father not alive? As I feel ...

AMOL: He is alive.

JAMES: Of course?

AMOL: Yes. Of course!

JAMES: She should not do this.

AMOL: But she did. This was natural for her. She used to beat me and my brother.

JAMES: Don't take it otherwise. All mothers do this for building the character of their children. So, take it as a blessing.

AMOL: No ... no. That is not the matter. The real matter is that she wanted to be free from me so she could enjoy her life freely. I was a burden on her. I was one of the obstructions in her life. So, she divorced me.

JAMES: What type of woman she is? How does she do all this?

AMOL: Shamelessly.

JAMES: Has she not shame?

AMOL: Not one jot of shame.

JAMES: What type of mother is she?

AMOL: Like all others.

JAMES: No.

AMOL: I am quite right. It is true. I have seen it.
