The monuments and headstones of the Imperial Light Horse Regiment

Compiled by Robin Smith

We Rest Here Content is not the history of the Imperial Light Horse Regiment — that was written by the regiment's Intelligence Officer, Lieutenant George Fleming Gibson and published in 1937 as The Story of the Imperial Light Horse in the South African War 1899—1902.

We Rest Here Content approaches the subject of the I.L.H. from a different viewpoint. It looks at all the known monuments and memorials as well as other accounts of I.L.H. involvement in the war.

About the author

Robin describes himself as a battlefield collector. He has visited and studied battlefields in his own country, South Africa, as well as in Europe and the USA. Proper understanding of any clash and conflict requires knowledge of the ground on which it was fought. Robin has done a lot of travelling and walking in order to uncover places that have been forgotten and his book will guide you to them. There are many other sites that are better known and Robin's efforts recorded in his book should help their preservation. Many of these places are on private property but the farmers or landowners are usually cooperative.
