Billboard

The activists interpreted the billboard's message as promoting an adult site. When this message got around, much distress and anger was caused in parts of this community in London. Thus, the poster was graffitied with a message calling for the promotion of online porn advertising to be kept off the streets. Unfortunately, it transpired that the word 'site' had been misspelt. It was meant to be 'sight' as in seeing and not site as in website and the activists had chased off the man posting the poster before he could finish the job, as that would have clarified the message visually in the form of three smiling fully dressed people wearing hi-tech pairs of spectacles.
